

Review & Giveaway: VivaBox

by ELIZA on December 15th, 2008

As a mom many of us get up bright and early, sometimes before a single person in the house begins to stir. Why? We must, we have to get up to begin the day, get those things done that have to be done. Make those lunches, prepare the clothes, get lists together, breakfast made, dinner planned, etc. Many mornings you wake up, toss a filter in the coffee pot, a scoop of whatever ya got and brew it.

Is that just any coffee? Or the one in your budget but you tend to drop in tons of sugar, creamer, milk, etc just to make it taste like your favorite blend from a coffee shop? That's what I tend to do. I love my coffee in the morning as it briefly gets me to step outside myself for a bit.

You can get all that in a small box. The box is called Vivabox, there are a variety of different ones to choose from: Spa in a box, Gourmet food in a box, Tea Time box, Wine box and mine, the Coffee in a Box. Prices range from $45 on up, but it'll definitely be a gift no one else is going to copy.

I love my little Coffee box, it comes in a sturdy box that has a velvet-like interior. Inside contains a small bottle of Torani Classic Hazelnut syrup, three small bags of coffee, Jazzman CD and a gift card. Once you've tried the sample coffees you can take the gift card, go online and pick your gift. I loved the Sumatra Mandheling.

This is a great Christmas gift product because you can send someone a box of what they like whether it is a spa or even coffee. They try it and pick their favorite item and you've not only given them a thoughtful gift but allowed them to get themselves what they really want.

One lucky winner is going to get this package. Who will it be? Comment below telling me what other product you'd like from VivaBox if you could get any. Deadline December 18th, I'll announce the winner on the 19th. You'll have 24 hours to respond.
